WANTS HONOR NOT LIBERTY

Pretty French Girl Chooses to Remain with Sisters of the Divine Confession.

MAN TRIES TO FREE HER.

Marcella Beaugent Says She Is Not the Swarthy Frenchman's Wife and Shuns Him.

Marcella Beaugent, a white-faced and dejected young Frenchwoman, appeared before Justice Gleicher in the Supreme Court on a writ of habeas corpus this afternoon to secure her release from a bondage against her desire.

The application for the writ was made by Thomas F. Cherry, in behalf of Octave Beaugent, who claims to be her husband. Assistant District Attorney James J. Connell, opposing the writ, told the Court that Beaugent was not the girl's husband and that she had no desire to be released.

At this moment a swarthy man with a black moustache and beaming brown slouched into court and dropped into a back seat. It was Beaugent.

"Get out of there! Get out quick!" growled James McNiery, the veteran clerk in chambers. "I told you there was no seat for you here. Get out!"

The black Frenchman shuffled out for the third time, while the indignant clerk muttered something about hanging being too good for the likes of some people.

The girl sat behind Caroline R. Walsh, the Salvation Army Captain, who is probation officer on the West Side, and a gentle-faced woman of the church. She did not seem to see him, but gazed directly into the face of this lady.

Mr. Connell told the court that Marcella was arrested by Patrolman Higgins in the Tenderloin the night of Oct. 17; that next day on her own confession Magistrate Hogan committed her to the care of the Sisters of the Divine Compassion, No. 125 Second avenue, to give her the chance for reform she prayed for. Then this man applied for a writ of habeas corpus, but that she desired to remain with the good sisters. He said his right name was not Beaugent, but Chevalier, and the swarthy Frenchman was not her husband at all.

He told the Court that the girl was brought to America for immoral purposes and had been turned into the streets of the Tenderloin only two days before her arrest. He asked for an adjournment until Wednesday that the presence of the French Consul might be secured and thus have the unfortunate girl sent home to France.

The adjournment was then ordered. And the sad young Frenchwoman, who had listened but understood nothing, returned to the Sisters of the Divine Compassion with the gentle-faced woman on one side and Probation Officer Walsh, in her chic Salvation Army costume, on the other.

In the corridor they passed close to Beaugent, and she shrank from him as false passed.

BOY RESCUES BURNING GIRL

Brave Seven-Year-Old's Presence of Mind Saves Little Playmate's Life.

But for the presence of mind of seven-year-old Harry Moore, Annie Kennedy, eight years old, who lives in Seventy-first street, Homewood, a suburb of Brooklyn, would have been burned to death this morning while playing over a bonfire near her house. Several children living in the neighborhood had collected a huge pile of leaves, and after starting a fire, as children usually do, played around the flames. The sport finally became one of daring each other to jump over the fire.

Little Annie, who is a sunny-haired, blue-eyed girl and an only child, at first seemed afraid to follow the rest of her companions in their play, but the jeers and taunts of her playmates at last made her give in, and she jumped over the flames, but not far enough to bring her out of danger, and her dress became ignited.

In a second, she was all aflame and, becoming frightened, started to run up the street, while the wind fanned the flames into a blaze. Running after her without any hesitation and pulling off his overcoat as he went, Harry Moore caught up with the girl and, throwing her to the ground, with his overcoat over her, he smothered the flames. The girl came to her aid and carried the child home, where the family physician found that, though badly burned, she would recover.

With his overcoat burned beyond repair, Harry also went home and modestly told his parents, who, instead of whipping the boy, as he expected, realized the brave act of their boy, and he is not only a hero in their eyes, but also with his playmates.

Young Moore, who lives in Seventy-first street, was at once brought to the city by the father of the girl whose life he had saved, who presented him with the best suit of clothes and overcoat that money could buy.

FRANK GETS FIVE YEARS.

Red-Pepper Jewelry Thief, with Starving Family, Is Severely Sentenced.

Despite the pleadings of the wife and aged mother of the prisoner, despite scores of letters asking that clemency be extended, Judge Aspinall, in the Brooklyn County Court, to-day sentenced Anthony J. Frank, the red-pepper jewelry thief, to five years in Sing Sing prison.

When sentence was pronounced Mrs. Frank and her mother-in-law made a pathetic scene in court. It was necessary to use violence to remove them.

"So much interest has been aroused in this case," said Judge Aspinall to-day, in pronouncing sentence, "that I have thoroughly investigated it. I know all about it, and I want to say that the small tradesman of this city must be protected as well as the big merchants."

"The sentence of the court is that you shall serve five years in the State Prison at Sing Sing."

Frank's wife and mother, who were sitting side by side, arose to their feet when they heard the severe sentence and screamed at the top of their voices. Their cries could be heard all through the court house.

A squad of policemen dragged them to the corridor, where they continued their lamentations until forced from the building.

MORGAN AND HILL CONFER.

Northwestern Railway Situation Evidently Discussed.

$300,000 Wagered To-Day at Odds That Closed at 10 to 6—Crocker, Goaded Out of Silence, Still Predicts Victory.

A sharp slump in the election betting to-day in Wall street and elsewhere in the city frightened the Tammany leaders badly, even though they still continued to predict victory. Richard Crocker was goaded to talking for the first time in a fierce outburst declaring New York the best governed city in the country, and predicting a Democratic victory.

Three hundred thousand dollars was wagered in Wall Street, bringing the total bet on the outcome of the Mayoralty election to the enormous sum of a million dollars. Hundreds of thousands remained in the hands of the backers of the fusion ticket at the closing of the market. The Tammany men had been routed, even the enticing odds that prevailed at the close failing to bring them into the field.

Ten to 8 was the figure at which the betting opened on the curb to-day. The flood of Low money soon drove the odds down a point. At the close any part of $100,000 was offered at 10 to 6 with no takers.

The Tammany men took refuge by offering to bet 2 to 1 that Unger would defeat Jerome. One wager of $500 was placed that Van Wyck would be elected.

Frank C. Lawrence, a broker, offered to bet $1,000 to $100 that Low would carry Kings County. He found no takers.

BIG BETS PLACED ON EVE THE OF ELECTION.

Low money went begging all afternoon in Wall street at $100 to $50.

In the closing half hour 10 to 6 was offered by the enthusiastic Fusion men, but no takers were in sight.

Among the large bets placed were the following:

Mendham Bros., $10,000 to $5,000 on Low with a syndicate of Tammany betters.

F. H. Brooks, $10,000 on Low against $7,500 on Shepard with Max Byrd.

Dominick & Williams, $10,000 on Low against $5,000 with J. L. McCormick.

Hale & Steiglitz, $15,200 on Shepard against $10,000, contributed by a Low syndicate.

The Tammany men, finding themselves off their feet by the avalanche of Low money, turned to backing Unger against Jerome.

Edward Wasserman wagered $2,000 against $1,000 with Weaver, Harris & Co., that Unger would defeat Jerome.

$10,000 Unger money.

J. L. McCormick announced he had any part of $10,000 to wager on Unger's election at odds of 2 to 1. Joe Ullman said he would have $2,000 on the Hoffman House to wager on the District Attorney's election at similar odds.

J. L. Maloney wagered $50 to $250 with Charles Minzschelmer on Unger.

Broker Frank Lawrence's offer of $1,000 to $100 that Low would carry Kings, found no takers.

E. M. Heath bet $5,000 on Low to West Pollack's $4,000.

Dominick & Williams bet 2,000 on Low to John Mullarky's $1,000.

Mullarky placed $120 on Shepard against J. L. McCormick's $1,500.

Robert Lewis bet $500 to $100 on Low with Ackerman & Coles.

L. Agostini bet $500 to $100 on Low with Frederick Schwede.

Allen, Wood & McGraw reported one bet of $500 even on the election of Van Wyck.

J. J. Judge, a curb broker, who places a great deal of Tammany money, executed the following commissions:

Some of the Bets Recorded.

Four thousand dollars to $5,000 with Mendham Bros.

Two thousand dollars to $2,500 with Hale & Steiglitz.

Eight hundred dollars to $1,000 with Allen, Wood & McGraw.

ELECTION DAY TO BE COLDEST THIS FALL.

The special election forecast by E. H. Emery, the local forecaster, is as follows:

"Tuesday will be the coldest day thus far of the season. The day, generally, will be partly cloudy to clear, with fresh northwest winds."

George Millett took the Shepard end in a bet of $100 to $50 with James McGowan.

J. J. Judge's offer of 5 to 1 that Low's plurality in Kings would be over 5,000 brought no response.

CROCKER GOADED INTO TALKING.

"All this talk about the City of New York being ruled by thieves, blackmatters and gamblers is a conspiracy to delude the voters into voting against the Democratic ticket. New York is the best governed city in the world. Now, if it be true that it is run by thieves and gamblers, I would advise the other cities in the United States to get the same class of men to rule them. It is the old story of Lincoln telling the men who were complaining about Grant to drink the same brand of rum that he drank."

Thus spoke Richard Crocker in an interview with an Evening World reporter at the Democratic Club to-day. He led up to the remark in a general discussion of the political outlook in Greater New York. It is the first interview on the political situation that the Chief of Tammany Hall has given during the present campaign.

In looking over the field he expressed a confidence in the success of the entire city and county ticket of the Democratic party. He said it was a remarkable thing that every daily newspaper in the city except one was against Tammany Hall.

When asked by what plurality he expected the Tammany ticket to win, he said:

"The figures of a Democratic majority that I give out are those furnished last night at the meeting of the Executive Committee at Tammany Hall—67,233."

"How will Kings County go?" Mr. Crocker was asked.

"I would not attempt to predict. Kings County should endorse Mr. Shepard by giving him a handsome majority. He deserves it. He is one of the ablest men in the country. He ought to be recognized in Brooklyn for his great ability. Brooklyn ought to be proud of him. We appreciate him over here in Manhattan to the fullest extent."

Mr. Crocker paused for a moment. Then he said:

"Have you ever thought how many years New York has been under the control of Tammany? Have you ever thought of that? It has been a good many years, hasn't it? In the last twenty years how many of them has Tammany been out of power? Four years, I think; isn't it? Say, in the last sixteen years. In that time Tammany has been out of power three years.

"And those years in which it was out of power were very hard and bad years for the city. During the years that Tammany has been in power all the great improvements in the city have been made. The city has grown up to be the finest and greatest in the United States under the government of Tammany Hall."

"All this talk about the city of New York being ruled by thieves and blackmatters and gamblers is a conspiracy to delude the voters into voting against the Democratic ticket. New York is the best governed city in the world. Now, if it be true that it is run by thieves and gamblers, I would advise the other cities in the United States to get the same class of men to rule them."

"Why, it was only the other evening," continued Mr. Crocker, "that a gentleman said to me: 'I have always voted against Tammany heretofore, but this time I am going to vote for Tammany. I believe New York is the finest governed city in the world and I have confidence in the men at the head of Tammany Hall.' Then the gentleman told me the story about Gen. Grant and President Lincoln. Several men had gone to Lincoln and complained that Grant drank too much rum. Lincoln said to them: 'When does Grant get his rum?' They could not tell him and he said: 'Well, I wish all my generals would get that same brand and drink it, for he is the best fighter I have.' And that is the way it is with Tammany."

Mr. Crocker moved toward the front door of the club as if about to go out. Then he turned around and said:

"On the other side some of them are actually afraid to come to New York because they are afraid that the city is overrun by thieves. It is a fact that I have had men in England say to me that New York was a terribly wicked city. And they believe it, too."

"They believe that when you go out into the streets you will get knee deep in mud, and that at night you must stay indoors or you will be robbed and murdered. What are you going to say to them? If you deny their stories they produce a New York newspaper and show you what your own journals say about your city."

"Simply a Conspiracy."

"It is not only the New York papers that say these things. The same stories are sent out to the papers in the other States. Why, we have no thieves here. It is simply a conspiracy. New York is free from vice than any other large city in this country. Take Chicago, for instance. There are more crimes in Chicago than in New York yet they tell us that there is no city as bad as Gotham. Why, we have no thieves here. We have no bank robbers. You don't hear of those things in New York. The thieves and the robbers are not allowed to remain here. I say New York is the best governed city in America."

Mr. Crocker was asked at Tammany Hall to-morrow night to receive the returns. He spent the day there and at Shepard's Millionaire headquarters at the Hoffman House.
